Behind Every Behavior Is A Belief

Whenever you are confused about why you did something, look for a "belief".

Beliefs compel you to do what you might otherwise think is stupid. The belief isn't stupid. It's just a belief.

Change the belief and you change the behavior.

Most people will have no clue that their behavior comes from their own beliefs.

They will want to blame others – the church, the economy, their family, friends, childhood, and so on. Blame is easy. It avoids responsibility.

Recognising that all behavior is caused by a belief will help you select better beliefs for your self. It will also help you understand others.
